

CHARLIE PARR

ONE MAN • ONE GUITAR • ONE FOOT IN THE GRAVE

This is honest blood & guts.

There's a reason why Greg Brown says, I think he's just wonderful and he really reminds me of a young Dave Van Ronk ... he's got that kind of solid deal to him.

There's a reason why Alan Sparhawk, Richard Adams, Dakota Dave Hull, Spider John Koerner, Robert Crumb (!) and an ever-growing list of other respected musicians give him praise.

There's a reason why magazines write things about him like:

Parr's music cannot be absorbed in one hearing or even several. There's just too much far-from-simple human reality going on. The songs take their power from their cumulative effect, which comes in the eventual recognition that chunks of coal mined by genius shine like diamonds. (Ramblings).

or...

...Charlie Parr captures the intense sound of the folk music of America's frozen north. His raw voice, lightning finger picking and plaintive but wry songs have made him one of the most important contemporary protagonists of the American folk tradition. (Bath International Music Festival)

Charlie Parr is the real deal. We're not pulling your leg.

His albums have received critical acclaim and have sold well into the thousands. He's toured the UK, Ireland and Scotland countless times, as well as pert 'near every nook and cranny of the United States. He was a guest musician on A Prairie Home Companion (April 2004), starred in Travis Wilkerson's independent film, "Who Killed Cock Robin?" (2005, also contributed to the soundtrack), and has had his UK releases represented on the UK independent music charts.

His music was also featured on a PBS special (2004) and his music can be heard on radio stations throughout the United States and Europe.

But don't take our word for it... listen to his music. You'll be glad you did. We promise.

Charlie is continually expanding his touring schedule and promoting his latest cd, Jubilee, which is available at www.charlieparr.com and fine record shops.
